Apparently the equipment that you take on a camping trip must be pretty important judging from all the preparations going on in our household these last few weeks.

One item that made the younger generation in our family happy was our nine passenger station wagon, and boy, can we use it! With Tommy, the twins, and I on one seat in our other car things got pretty crowded. The wagon gives us lots of room — a seat for Mother and Dad, the middle seat for Tommy and I, and the back seat for the twins with room left for them to spill over into when they get tired of the seat.

We have an air mattress for the station wagon and also a sleeping porch. This is a canvas with a lot of screening that goes over the end of the wagon when it is opened up. This makes a fine place to sleep and gives the many other things on our list that must be included such as flashlights, blankets, pillows, hatchets, shovels, propane lantern, insect bombs, cameras, etc.

Well, folks, we're about ready to get off on this long awaited jaunt. I hope we survive the first week and will be in shape to write and tell you about the compartments and shelves for certain items such as the stove, food, water, can, tent, suit cases, etc. Even though we seem to have a lot of room Mother laid down the law to me about how many clothes I could take.

Mothers just don't seem to understand these days, do they? Speaking of camping equipment they really have some gadgets on the market now. One that we are going to try out is disposable frying pans. It has a heavy handle, and a frame made of aluminum. Then there is a heavy pan made of aluminum foil that fits in the frame.

It is supposed to fry, cook, broil or bake and then you throw it away — the disposa — pan, not the frame. We also have a cooking and eating kit that has the necessary utensils for six persons. Its quite unbelievable but in space about 8 inches by 10 inches there are 3 cooking pots, 2 frying pans, a coffee pot, 6 cups, and 5 plates.

Dad's favorite piece of equipment is the pump for the air mattresses, especially if he can persuade Tommy or the twins that it is a good job for them. Of course there are many other things on our list that must be included such as flashlights, blankets, pillows, hatchets, shovels, propane lantern, insect bombs, cameras, etc.

Well, folks, we're about ready to get off on this long awaited jaunt. I hope we survive the first week and will be in shape to write and tell you about the compartments and shelves for to the audience. Two teams, scorers were chosen by the instructor Dave Layton from the Christian Ministry to Migrants, who presented certificates of basic archery course.

Mrs. E. C. Johnson, director from Pahokee introduced the staff of leaders: Miss Nancy Lett and Miss Margaret Lynn Shilley, Pahokee; Mrs. Lee Berthill, Mrs. Richard Hodges, Mrs. Peter L. Chance, Mrs. Ben C. Cox, Mrs. Enni Wolf and Mrs. Fred White.

The three units also put on skits. The Brownies presented Indian dances, which carried out part of theme on Indians, the younger intermediates dramatized a song depicting things they had learned in camp and the older group gave a skit on camp experiences. The program closed with Indian Prayer taught by Mrs. William Plummer of Pahokee.

According to leaders this year the camp proved to be very successful than last year, with a more varied program of outdoor activities which cannot be done in the winter.

Archery was the high light of the intermediates but hiking, cookouts, camping out, fire building, camping skills making camp equipment, lashing, and making lauravs was among other activities. The Brownies unit in carrying out the Indian theme made and painted totem poles, learned Indian dances and songs, cooking out, using bud-dy burners made out of tin cans and lashing. All three units learned many Girl Scout songs.

JERRY W. CARTER
for Railroad Commission
Group 2

While Jerry made only one mention to the voters that he would be there on payday, yet he has been instrumental in saving the people of Florida more than $7,977,951 by reducing rates and delaying rate increases sought on freight, power and light and telephone, during his present and previous terms of office. Jerry carried off the applause honors at the Bay Front Park Rally with a burst of humor and common sense that put them to shouting and stamping their feet. When a candidate can generate that kind of enthusiasm look out for him.
